Department Vision

The Religious Studies team at Biddulph High School wants all students to explore and understand religion and worldviews in the past and present, in different communities, taking into account cultural and geopolitical contexts, to consider change and dissent in religion and worldviews and the multiple dimensions of belief, belonging, culture and identity. All students are unique and we want students to thrive in their Religious Studies lessons regardless of their starting point. We want to provide an excellent education in a safe supportive learning environment, one where students are valued and make positive contributions to the school community, and where students go on to become responsible, independent members of society. We also want our students to become independent learners, who are critical in their thinking, informed in their choices and confident in their ability to succeed in the modern world, who are respectful and tolerant, driven and confident and who strive for the best.

Faculty / Subject Policy – Humanities and Social Sciences

Students need information and guidance in order to plan the next steps in their learning. The Humanities faculty believe that oral and written feedback are closely interrelated and provide opportunities for staff to identify students' strengths and to give clear and constructive advice on which areas need improvement. A supportive classroom ethos is essential so that students feel safe to take risks, for example by giving speculative responses to challenging questions. Once teaching routinely provides good oral feedback, then it is possible to provide more informative and selective written feedback.

Oral feedback within the Humanities and Social Sciences Faculty:

Oral feedback is a powerful force for moving students on and will be the most regular and interactive form of feedback used. It is both direct (targeted to individuals or groups), but also indirect (others listen and reflect on what has been said). Students should be provided with oral feedback in every lesson. Oral feedback may be provided in a variety of ways:

- correcting an error;
- providing information;
- appraising and praising;
- challenging;
- seeking clarification;
- urging amplification, exploration or development;
- redirecting learning or activity;
- focusing or orienting learning;
- confirmation and moving learning on;
- crystallising steps;
- distilling and summarising learning;
- encouraging students to reflect.

Staff will use a variety of oral feedback measures, the main purposes of using different types of feedback is to:

- acknowledge what students have learned and encourage them to reflect on and extend their learning still further;
- recognise that students need time to reflect on their learning;
- encourage students to pose further questions to clarify or further develop their own or each other's thinking;
- encourage students to make next steps;
- Teachers' comments should always be both positive – recognising students' efforts and achievements to date, and developmental – offering specific details of ways forward.

Written Feedback

Teachers are required to provide students with written feedback where necessary and this will assist students to recognise their next steps in learning and how to take them. Written feedback will be constructive ensuring that students are clear about what is expected of them. The success criteria will be a reference point for a teacher's written feedback and needs to be shared and made clear to students (and where appropriate) in advance of attempting a task.

It is important (for staff) to consider how prompt and regular feedback can be given that will encourage students to think about their work and the task. The written feedback will:

- focus on the learning objectives selectively;
- confirm that students are on the right track;
- stimulates the correction of errors or improvement of a piece of work;
- scaffolds or supports students' next steps.

Examples of the type of written feedback that students will be provided with by staff within the Humanities Faculty:

- Yellow-box marking;
- focused on the use of subject specific terminology and compliant with the Biddulph High School Literacy Policy;
- bullet point actions;
- whole-class feedback sheets;
- simple question prompts: Why? How? Explain?;
- linked to success criteria, mark schemes and level descriptors;
- encouragement of “up-wording”;
- supportive;
- linked to modelling of exemplar answers;
- quizzing;
- deeper-marking of one/two selected pieces.

Peer and Self- Assessment/Feedback:

Humanities staff will also aim to ensure that there are regular opportunities for both peer feedback and self-assessment. In order for this to be effective the following will be taken into consideration:

- the criteria for evaluating any learning achievements must be transparent to students to enable them to have a clear overview, both of the aims of their work and of what it means to complete it successfully;
- students should be taught the habits and skills of collaboration in peer assessment;
- students should be encouraged to keep in mind the aims of their work and to assess their own progress to meet these aims as they proceed;
- peer and self-assessment make unique contributions to the development of students’ learning – they secure aims that cannot be achieved in any other way;
- checklists and reference to mark schemes and level descriptors will be utilised in order to support students in the decision making process.

Student responses to feedback:

Students in Humanities lesson will be required to regularly and purposefully engage with the feedback provided by staff:

- students should be engaged in a reflective review of the work they have done to enable them to plan their revision effectively;
- students should be encouraged to set questions and mark answers to help them, both to understand the assessment process and to focus further efforts for improvement;
- students should be encouraged through peer and self-assessment to apply criteria to help them understand how their work might be improved;
- students should strive to be pro-active and should be prepared to learn;
- purple Pen responses should be:
 - a response to feedback

- improvement – extension
- re-draft
- completion of a correction
- to work to “close the gap” on the issues identified
- students should also ensure that their work displays high levels of presentation and that it meets the standards and expectations of class teachers.
